DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

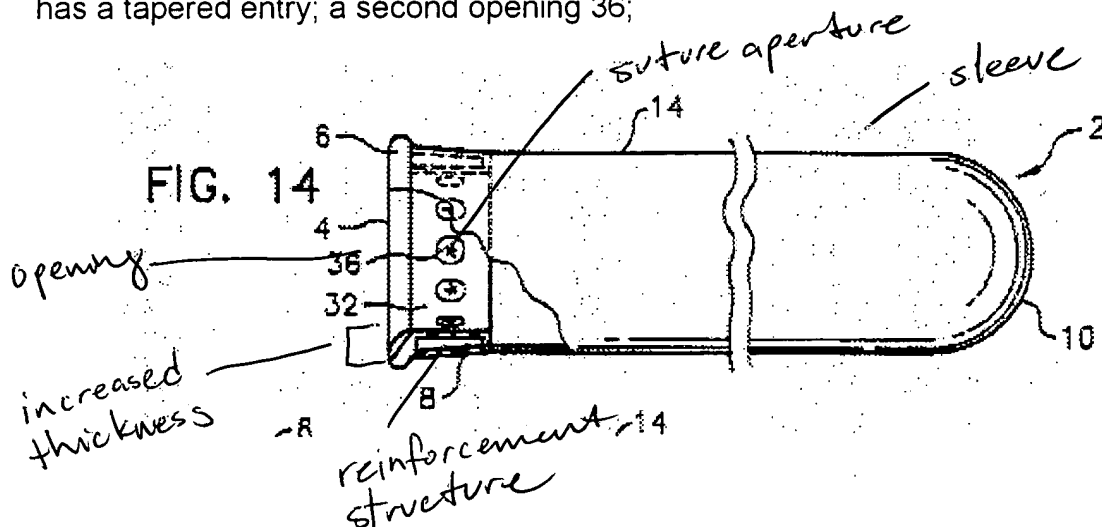

1. Applicant's arguments filed 8 June 2005 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.
2. In response to applicant's argument that the Schwartz device is a condom used for male erection, a recitation of the intended use of the claimed invention must result in a structural difference between the claimed invention and the prior art in order to patentably distinguish the claimed invention from the prior art. If the prior art structure is capable of performing the intended use, then it meets the claim. In a claim drawn to a process of making, the intended use must result in a manipulative difference as compared to the prior art. See In re Casey, 370 F.2d 576, 152 USPQ 235 (CCPA 1967) and In re Otto, 312 F.2d 937, 939, 136 USPQ 458, 459 (CCPA 1963).
3. In response to applicant's argument that the Schwartz device teaches valves and are not suture holes, a recitation of the intended use of the claimed invention must result in a structural difference between the claimed invention and the prior art in order to patentably distinguish the claimed invention from the prior art. If the prior art structure is capable of performing the intended use, then it meets the claim. The valves/holes of Schwartz are fully capable of receiving a suture. In a claim drawn to a process of making, the intended use must result in a manipulative difference as compared to the prior art. See In re Casey, 370 F.2d 576, 152 USPQ 235 (CCPA 1967) and In re Otto, 312 F.2d 937, 939, 136 USPQ 458, 459 (CCPA 1963).

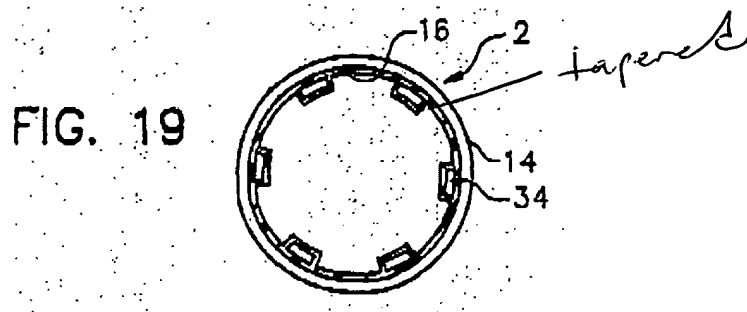

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

4. Claims 39-44, 46-53, 55, and 56 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Schwartz 5513652.

5. Schwartz teaches a constriction sleeve for constricting body tissue when applied thereto, the sleeve comprising: a generally cylindrical portion and an opening at one end; the sleeve comprising resilient expandable biocompatible material; at least one suture aperture; a reinforcement structure; wherein the reinforcement structure is positioned proximate the suture aperture; wherein the reinforcement structure comprises a band of material extending at least partially radially about the sleeve and added to the sleeve in a manner as to structurally reinforce the sleeve; wherein the band comprises a layer of resilient material having a higher tear strength than the resilient material; wherein the band is made integrally with the sleeve wall; wherein the band comprises a discrete component; wherein the sleeve comprises a plurality of suture apertures spaced radially about the sleeve; wherein none or more of the apertures has a tapered entry; a second opening 36;

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

6. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

7. Claims 45 and 54 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Schwartz.

8. Schwartz discloses the invention except for the sleeve has an increase thickness extending radially outwardly. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have the increased thickness extending radially outwardly, since it has been held that rearranging parts of an invention involves only routine skill in the art. In re Japikse, 86 USPQ 70.
